Federal Regulations Limit Savings Withdrawals

Tips to Help You Curb Savings Withdrawals

In the March 2005 Connections newsletter, we provided information about federal regulations limiting the number of electronic transactions within a calendar month. To assist with managing your transaction activity, below are a few tips to help curb your savings withdrawals:

- Plan ahead and make one large transfer instead of several small transfers. Transfers made through the TeleCenter, SST or SkyBranch® each count as individual transactions.
- You may utilize an ATM to transfer funds between accounts.
- Plan ahead to either stop by a Service Center or mail in your funds transfer.
- Balance your checking account on a regular basis. This will help limit the number of NSF transfers from your savings account, which count towards the number of transactions allowed.
- Do not set up ACH withdrawals (automatic debits that you set up with merchants or service providers by giving them your account number) to come out of your savings account. Set ACH withdrawals to come out of your Alliant checking account, which is not subject to this regulation.

office closings

Alliant will be closed in observance of the following holiday:
